Director:	Randy Holland

Presidents Corner

Last meeting's speaker, Andy Johnson gave a rather colorful description of his first flight and the feelings of nervousness preparing for the flight and the elation and satisfaction of lift off. I think his description apply any of us who have built and made that first flight. Well, since our last meeting, Andy received an "AD" from the manufacture to replace the propeller hub as a number of them did not properly clamp the propeller blades. I noticed that Andy finally got a new one and was installing it today (5-6-2011). With that completed, he should be back in the air this weekend to complete the remaining flight tests . . . I have "dibs" on being the first passenger!

Meeting Plans

It has been nearly a year since we visited our Webmaster, Randy Holland's project which is predominantly a wood structured plane called a Maranda. The meeting will be held at Randy's house located at 1936 Autumn Sage Ave. in North Las Vegas. Meeting time will begin with a BBQ at the house starting at 6:00 PM. Most of us have GPS's but just in case you do not have one in your car, here is copy of the MapQuest directions from Henderson Airport to Randy's home.

Using you Plane for a good cause

This is forwarded from Fred Wilson about his Pilots and Paws flight on April 9th:

While everybody was at Northtown Sat (4/9), I had a trip to KTPH (Tonopah) on a dog rescue flight. I belong to PilotsNPaws and we move rescued dogs and cats from where they have been rescued from "kill shelters" to new "forever" homes.

Dog rescue complete.

On the ramp at Tonopah. (4/9/11)

Some of you are pilots and we can always use more volunteers.

Click on "Join our group" just above the word "Rescues."

A 90 pound Rhodesian Ridgeback, 10 month old puppy. The kennel (German Shepherd size) is in the back seat forward of the open baggage door and behind the open front door. You can see a tiny bit of it by the blue (forward) seat back.

How to get this 90 pounds into the kennel? You get in the airplane by putting your left foot on the step (hangs down below the baggage door), then step up on the wing with your right foot first and then walk up the (black) wing walk and get in the airplane. I was wondering how I was going to carry this 90 pounds up the two steps (that I couldn't see if I was carrying the dog.)

The dogs owner solved the problem nicely. He told the dog to jump up, which he did and then he told him "kennel". The dog walked up the wing and got in the kennel. LOL We closed the kennel door, slid the kennel back onto the seat and we were in the air within 5-6 minutes.

Those of you that are in the cf group, please notice Barbi's "Cure Cystic Fibrosis" candle pin decal just behind the baggage door (both sides).

My copilot (Mat) and I flew up to Tonopah (NV) 1:39 and landed, dog was waiting and we had him loaded and then flew 1:21 back to Las Vegas (Henderson airport, actually).

For those who wonder why a person would give up a well trained pure bred dog. My understanding is that the owner was moving into an apartment on the east coast and couldn't take the dog with him. By giving him to the rescue people, the owner was assured that the dog would go to a good (inspected) home.

A fun flying day (with a purpose).
